EMPLOYEE DATA PROTECTION POLICY

Policy ID: POL-001 | Version 1.0 | Effective: 1 January 2024

Document Status: Synthetic policy version for PolicyLens testing

1. Purpose

This policy describes the basic safeguards used to protect employee personal data collected and maintained by the organization.

2. Scope

This policy applies to employee records maintained by Human Resources and other authorized departments.

3. Data Collection

The organization collects employee information needed for recruitment, payroll, benefits, workplace administration, and legal recordkeeping. Employees should be informed about the purpose of collection.

4. Access and Confidentiality

Access to employee personal data is limited to personnel who require the information for their work. Authorized users must keep employee records confidential and must not disclose them to unauthorized persons.

5. Storage and Retention

Employee records must be stored in approved company systems. Records are retained according to internal retention practices and applicable requirements. Records that are no longer needed should be securely disposed of.

6. Sharing

Employee personal data may be shared with authorized service providers or internal teams when required for legitimate business purposes. Sharing must be limited to the information needed.

7. Incident Reporting

Suspected loss, unauthorized access, or disclosure of employee data should be reported to the IT or Human Resources department for review.

8. Responsibilities

Human Resources maintains employee records. IT supports technical safeguards. All employees must protect confidential information.

Testing note: This synthetic document intentionally includes relationships to Data Retention Policy (POL-003) and Data Incident Response Policy (POL-004) in Version 2.0 so dependency and change-impact analysis can be tested. It is not an official organizational policy or legal advice.
