Status	Superseded

1. Purpose

This policy establishes fair and consistent employment practices and prohibits unlawful discrimination in employment decisions. The organization is committed to ensuring that employment opportunities are administered using appropriate and job-related considerations.

2. Scope

This policy applies to employees, managers, supervisors, HR personnel, applicants, and other individuals involved in employment decisions. It covers recruitment, selection, promotion, compensation, training, performance management, disciplinary action, and termination.

3. Definitions

Protected characteristics and other prohibited grounds are characteristics or circumstances that must not be used as an unlawful basis for an employment decision. Objective criteria are job-related considerations that can reasonably be used to evaluate an employment decision.

4. Roles and Responsibilities

Managers are responsible for making employment decisions consistently and escalating concerns to HR. HR is responsible for maintaining procedures that support fair employment practices and for advising managers when concerns are raised.

Employees may raise concerns about discriminatory treatment through the organization's grievance or HR investigation process.

5. Related Policies and Controls

This policy should be read together with applicable grievance, disciplinary, recruitment, employee conduct, and record-management policies.

6. Policy Requirements

Employment decisions must be made fairly and consistently. Managers must use objective, job-related considerations and must not base decisions on protected characteristics or other prohibited grounds.

Recruitment and employment decisions must follow approved organizational procedures. Managers are responsible for applying the same approved criteria consistently to employees and applicants in comparable circumstances.

7. Records and Evidence

Recruitment and employment records must contain sufficient information to demonstrate that decisions followed approved organizational criteria. Records must be maintained in accordance with applicable record-retention requirements.

8. Exceptions and Escalation

Concerns about discriminatory treatment must be escalated through the grievance or HR investigation process. Reports must be handled confidentially to the extent reasonably possible.

9. Monitoring and Review

HR will review workforce practices periodically to identify potential concerns relating to unequal treatment. Where a concern is identified, HR may recommend corrective or preventive action.

10. Version Change Summary

Version 1 establishes the baseline principles for non-discrimination, fair employment decisions, appropriate records, escalation, and HR review.
